What does the Cory Scholarship provide? The Scholarship fund provides up to $1,000 towards tuition remission for two students each semester.

How can the funds be used? The funds are transferred from the Scholarship Office to the student's account via the Bursars Office. Thus, the funds can be used for tuition and related expenses.

Who is eligible for the award? All undergraduates being mentored by a faculty or staff member, post-doc, or graduate student within the Department of Entomology are equally eligible for the Cory Scholarship.

What should an undergraduate do to be considered for the Scholarship? Students should apply for the award by submitting the following during the open application window:

1. A letter of application, describing their activities in the Department of Entomology
2. A current transcript (unofficial will be accepted)
3. A letter of recommendation submitted by the ENTM faculty mentor. Recommendation letters submitted by the student will not be accepted.

When are applications submitted? The application window for spring semester opens mid-October & application window for fall semester opens mid-March.

How can students become involved in ENTM research or extension activities? Undergraduate Research Assistant Program (URAP), Howard Hughes Fellowships, Entomology Honors Program, and ENTM 389 Independent Research are a few of the ways that undergraduates have begun working in ENTM laboratories. Contact one of the ENTM faculty members to schedule an appointment.
